Letter to Parents of Athletes

The importance of parents in the education of children is very important. The support you show your child will have a dramatic effect upon that student's ability to accept the challenges of the classroom and extra-curricular activities in the education setting. Students will model parental beliefs and behaviors out of respect for them. This should be a very healthy situation.

There is a value system that is established in the home and nurtured in the classroom as well. Involvement in classroom and extra-curricular activities will help to continue developing this system.

Integrity, fairness, respect and strong work ethics are lifelong values taught through athletic participation. These are also the basic principles upon which good sportsmanship is developed. With these, the value of competition is great because it is fueled by honest rivalry, courteous relations and graceful acceptance of the results.
